

Ruhi Book 10.2. Section 13. Quote. Writing Quote.

Directions: Read it, speak it, write it. Read the quote silently and aloud. Read it several times plainly and with inflection. Read it poetically and boldly. Emphasize key words and phrases. Then write the quote, part by part, several times. Feel the words as you speak and write them.

Paint a picture in your mind and feel the meaning in your heart. It is not enough to memorize the words. Inwardly, we must understand the words with head and heart, and outwardly put them into practice in our daily life.

“Erelong shall We bring into being through you keen and penetrating eyes that will contemplate the manifold signs of their Creator and turn away from all that is perceived by the people of the world. Through you shall We bestow the power of vision upon whomsoever We desire, and lay hold upon those who have deprived themselves of this gracious bounty. These, verily, have drunk from the cup of delusion, though they perceive it not.”

Bahá’u’lláh

Bahá’u’lláh, The Summons of the Lord of Hosts, Bahá’í World Center, 2002, p. 11.

“Erelong shall We bring into being”

“through you keen and penetrating eyes”

“that will contemplate the manifold signs of their Creator”

“and turn away from all that is perceived by the people of the world.”

“Through you shall We bestow the power of vision upon whomsoever We desire,”

“and lay hold upon those who have deprived themselves of this gracious bounty.”

“These, verily, have drunk from the cup of delusion, though they perceive it not.”
